EXCELSIOR FLUID INKS.

Mercantile, for general purposes,
Record, for Ledgers and Records,
Copying, for Letter Press,

Carmine, of brilliant hue
CELEBRATED FOR

- 1st. Intense black color, (at first of a greenish blue.)
- 2d. Easy flow from the pen.
- 3d. Permanency, (will never fade by exposure.)
- 4th. Economy.

EXPLANATION—These Inks can be satisfactorily used the last drop. Other domestic Inks in a brief time grow too thick for use, and are then to be thrown away before half consumed.

The Carmine may be exposed to the action of the air without injury.

Facts Confirming the above Qualities.
1. These Writing Fluids are now in general use throughout the United States, with an increased demand.

2. They have been analyzed by Mr. Chilton, the celebrated Chemist of New York City, and pronounced "equal in quality and durability to the best imported English Fluids." No. 30, Fine St. Cincinnati, O.

LUCIFER, BY SNOWSTORM,
WILL stand the present season a OTTAWA HILL, on the Frankfort & Louisville Turnpike, 3 miles from Frankfort, and 7 miles from Louisville, at $15 to insure a coat, and pasture furnished for the winter.

Description and Pedigree.
Lucifer is a black iron grey 5 year old, with heavy white mane and tail; 15 1/2 hands high, and is a horse eminently calculated to produce stock suited to any purpose for which horse is required, being both self sufficient in appearance, of proper size, faultless in form, mild and gentle in disposition, with action both free and easy, bred by old snow-storm, who went once as naturally as another, and with unparalleled speed and style, and produced more fine saddle and harness horses in the two years he has been in Kentucky than any other horse known. He was of the pure Norman French breed from Canada, and his colts are commended wherever found, and are in demand. Lucifer's dam was a large brown mare, blood unknown; was a natural pacer and could, without training, pace her mile in 3 minutes.

He will attract the attention of breeders to this young horse, at his stand, where I have a good track, and where persons wishing to breed have an opportunity of seeing him at all times.

Bricks goes fishing with Blynks—Letter from Bricks.

NAKILLVILLE, June 26, 1860.

To the Editors of the Daily Patriot:

GENTLEMEN:—I see from the Patriot that you have been fishing with Blynks. I have been fishing with Blynks myself. He's a first rate fellow to go fishing with, but expensive. I don't want to hurt his feelings, but I must say that Blynks is not a cheap fellow to go fishing with. In fact, it costs something to go fishing with Blynks. It may cost something to go fishing with other people, also, but my experience only embraces Blynks. He's a good fellow as lives, but he won't do to go fishing with. I've tried it, and ought to know that it costs like the very dickens to go fishing with Blynks.

Last Thursday was two weeks ago, I received a note from Blynks. I paid the boy who brought it, a quarter in compliance with a verbal message from Blynks. I've got the note in my vest pocket now. No haven't either—yes I have.

DEAR BRICKS:—I'm going fishing to-morrow, and want you to go too. We'll have a glorious time. I shall get a buggy, and take along all the luxuries of the season, and it shan't cost you a cent—not a red. I shall insist on coming down for the entire swindle myself. You must go—in fact you had go.

Hardly. BLYNKS. P. S.—Please loan me five dollars. Send it by the boy. Will hand it back the day after to-morrow. If you're nothing less than a teufel, don't trouble yourself to get it broke; send it along; it's all the same. Besides I want to say ten or fifteen either—it's no difference to me. I can hand you one amount as easily as the other.

I sent the money and promised to go. About 12 o'clock that night I got another note from Blynks, in which he suggested that as we would probably be gone all day, I'd better turn out and have a ham, a couple of chickens, and a peck of buckwheat. I thought I'd better do as Blynks requested. We went out on College street, where Blynks purchased a fine chance of poles, reels and snoods, a couple of minnow buckets and the same number of game-bags. He was also about to lay in a double barrel shot gun, but he thought of Scott's novels; but I told him I thought I didn't have enough money to pay for more than we had already got (he had requested the dealer to hand me the bill for settlement), and remarking that he would wait till he caught me in funds, he led the way to the lively stable. Here Blynks ordered the best horse, a fine establishment, observing that he didn't care for a horse, but that he had invited me to go a fishing with him, and he'd be hanged if he'd suffer me to pay for an inferior article of turnout. We got into the buggy, and Blynks taking the reins, we drove off across College Hill towards Stone's River, where we proposed to spend the day in fishing.

About four miles from town, Blynks wanted to get out at a spring and uncork one of the bottles. Which we did. But one bottle isn't much in a crowd as large as Blynks and myself, and hence we uncorked two. In fact, several—say eight or ten. If there was one we didn't uncork it was owing to some oversight on the part of Blynks. We then got into the buggy again, (with the assistance of a colored person who had wanted the empty bottles and cigar box, and started on towards Stone's River to fish. But some how or other Blynks found out the horse and buggy had got turned around while we were at the spring, and he rode back to the stable, and Blynks said, pointing right between the towers of the First Presbyterian Church, "So Blynks turned him round again, and we started to Stone's River to fish. Blynks thrashed the horse with a fishing-pole, and sang a song very loud indeed. I think the song was something about—

"My wife is sick, my wife is sick,

"My wife is sick in bed,

"My wife is sick—she's always sick—

"I wish that she were dead."

I remonstrated with Blynks, and suggested that he might disturb the neighbors and cause us to be arrested for driving a disorderly buggy; but Blynks only said, "The neighbors, and as I didn't desire to encourage anything like immorality, I dropped the subject. I think we must have been going rather fast. Anyhow, when one of the reins got tangled about the horse's hind legs and the other mixed up with his tail, and he knocked in the spatter board with his heels, and shot out of the road, and jumped over a pile of logs, and left the buggy in a terrible wreck among them, Blynks and I went on after him a considerable distance before we hit. From this I am induced to believe that we were going rather fast. Blynks borrowed a blind mule and started back to town, to tell the people, he said, that they needn't be uneasy about us, while I got a straddle of a three-story load of wood to go to Stone's River after the horse. But when I saw how or other about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, I got to the top of College Hill, while Blynks was somewhere about Stone's River, Blynks says we must have got turned around again after we left the spring.

The lively stable man only charged me fifty dollars for breaking the buggy and mauling his horse (which I have since learned, had never run away but three or four times before), on condition that I would take the buggy off his hands at one-half of one per cent. under cost, and when I gave him my note for the amount, Blynks remarked that as the vehicle hadn't been in constant use more than two or three years, I had got off devilish well; that the lively stable man had acted the gentleman towards me, and that it was unjust in me not to pay him the cash. Which I would have done cheerfully, but Blynks had torn his coat and pants, and smashed his hat when we ran into that pile of logs, and as he said it wouldn't have happened if he hadn't invited me to go fishing with him; that he had submitted the case to Mrs. Blynks and his mother in law as arbitrators, and they had decided that I ought to repair the damages, and so I had paid for a new suit of clothes, including a hat, two pair of boots, and a pocket knife, all by myself; consequently, I was short of funds.

Now I want to know what I am to think of Blynks. He distinctly stated when he invited me to go fishing with him, that it should not cost me a cent—not a red. But cast your eye over the figures below, and tell me candidly if they indicate that the statement of Blynks is borne out by the result. I give you my part, I can't think it is. This I need not tell you, is a

G. Washington Bricks.

To account,

To wine, cigars, &c., to go fishing

with Blynks, $25 00

To fishing tackle, per Blynks, 12 25

To minnow buckets and game bags, per Blynks, 10 00

To hire of horse and buggy, and carrying and smashing same, 50 00

To new suit of clothes, including sundries, per Blynks, 48 50

To new buggy, good as new, but damaged, 275 00

Total, $415 75

Four hundred and fifteen dollars and seventy-five cents for going fishing with Blynks, and didn't get half way to the river! I wonder what it would have cost me if I had gone all the way.

I like Blynks. I haven't known him long, but I have courted his society from the start, and may add, and without egotism too, that he has courted my society from the start also. He has been so kind as to evince his friendship for me by borrowing five, ten or fifteen dollars of me from time to time, which he no doubt intends to repay when he comes into his property (which he tells me is large), and I like him. He is as clever a fellow as you ever saw, and I really like him considerably. But when he offers to take me a fishing again, and furnish all the luxuries of the season, and come down for the entire swindle myself, I'm inclined to think I shan't go.

Very Respectfully,

G. WASHINGTON BRICKS.

P. S. Do you happen to know of anybody around town who wants to buy the iron of a two hundred and seventy five dollars buggy? If you do, I wish you'd send him to me. I am not regularly in that business, but I've got a set of second hand iron of that description, and as they are of no use to me, I will let them go at a bargain.

A TEST OF BRECKINRIDGE ENTHUSIASM.—A responsible gentleman in an adjoining State having read the accounts of "Breckinridge enthusiasm" about here, and believing the same to be a myth, authorized us, through a friend in this city, to send him one hundred dollars that Breckinridge would get more Electoral votes than Breckinridge and Lincoln.

The same that Bell gets more Electoral votes than Breckinridge.

The same that Bell gets more popular votes than Breckinridge.

The same that Douglas gets more Electoral votes than Breckinridge.

The same that Lincoln gets more Electoral votes than Breckinridge.

The same that Lincoln gets more popular votes than Breckinridge.

The same that John Bell is the next President.

The same that Breckinridge is not.

One hundred to five hundred that the Breckinridge man who accepts will lose a majority of the above propositions.

One hundred to five hundred that he will lose them all.

The above propositions are open for ten days.

"OFF WITH HIS HEAD—SO MUCH FOR BUCKING HORN."—The telegraph yesterday announced the death of Col. Wm. H. Carroll, Postmaster at Memphis, and the appointment in his place of Col. Galaway, editor of the Arkansas Post.

Carroll was a delegate to the Charleston Baltimore Convention, and refused to allow himself to be assumed the seat of a Yancy dissident. Having assumed a seat that body, he abided in good faith his action, submitting to the sense of a majority in all matters pertaining to the organization. The Convention nominated Stephen A. Douglas, the man who had dared to differ with James Buchanan. For this, Col. Carroll, a delegate—a son of the gallant champion in arms and friend of Jackson, and an honored Democratic Governor of Tennessee—a man who has spent his time and money as freely as any other in Tennessee, in support of his party, and who did effective service for Buchanan in 1856—for daring to be independent, to think for himself, and to act upon his own honest convictions, has been cashiered. Surely it is hard enough for the office holders of James Buchanan to endorse his corrupt administration; but to be required to endorse his choice for the succession, in opposition to another orthodox Democrat, is too much.

Carroll spurned the base requirement, and he is beheaded. Such is modern Democracy. Who so craven as own allegiance to it?—Nashville Banner.

DEMOCRATIC DOINGS IN HART COUNTY.—Last Monday was the first day of the Circuit Court in Hart county, and several hundred of the people were assembled. We do not know whether a Democratic meeting had been called, but a Democratic meeting was organized. Col. Geo. T. Wood, one of the delegates to the National Democratic Convention, made a speech in defense of his position in favor of Douglas and against the secessionists. When he took his seat, resolutions approving his course, endorsing the nomination of Douglas and Johnson, and pledging them the support of the Hart Democracy, were passed without a single dissenting voice.

After the adjournment of the meeting Mr. Sampson, the Bell and Everett elector, made a speech that elicited the praise even of his political opponents. Then Capt. John Duncan, the elector appointed by the State Democratic Convention, took the stand and acknowledged his embarrassment, spoke for Breckinridge, Capt. D. was followed by two gentlemen for Douglas, and then the meeting adjourned.

All the applause and approbation were for the Douglas speakers. Breckinridge seems to have "no show at all" in Hart.—Lou. Jour.

ALABAMA AWAKE.—The friends of Bell and Everett in Alabama are getting more and more aroused in Alabama. They are rejoicing in the opportunity of at last meeting the secessionists under the lead of their great leader and expounder and the father of the Breckinridge ticket upon a direct issue. A friend writing us from Selma says of the recent Bell and Everett Convention there:

"Our Convention was a decided success, and even the Democracy who have been deriding and belittling us for weeks past, acknowledge that it was probably the most respectable State Convention ever held in Alabama. I must confess I was agreeably disappointed; not expecting to have ever seen so large and enthusiastic a Union meeting in 'disunion,' 'bolting' Alabama. What pleased me most, though, was that I thought I could perceive underlying the enthusiasm a determination to work throughout the canvass. I say, moreover, that I think there is more than a chance for our ticket to carry the State."—Nash. Banner.

A VERY BAD ACCIDENT.—A terrible accident occurred, between eleven and twelve o'clock, on Sunday morning, the 8th inst., at the residence of Mr. Hervey A. Rogers, on Cane Ridge, in this county, by which one of his children, Purvance, a bright, promising little boy, in the eighth year of his age, lost his life, and another, about two years younger, was severely maimed.

The two boys and a brother, some nine years old, were playing in an upper room of the house and, during their sport, got hold of a shot gun which had been standing in a closet in the room for a month or two. Somehow, one barrel of the gun, in the hands of the youngest, was charged, the contents passing through the abdomen of Purvance, entering in front and coming out at the back, and carrying away the two outer fingers from the left hand of the youngest boy. Purvance lived but a short time after the accident. The children had no thought that the gun was loaded. The contents were not noticed, would not have been noticed, probably by a casual observer, and were not noticed by the boys.—Paris Citizen.

LOUISIANA IN A FLAZE.—We refer every friend of the Union to the proceedings of the State Convention of the Constitutional Union party of Louisiana, held at Baton Rouge, which we published this morning. The Convention passed a resolution of the character which so signally distinguishes all the assemblages of the friends of Bell and Everett—perfect harmony and unprejudiced heartiness and enthusiasm. The enemy, on the other hand, is distracted and distrustful, involved in internecine broils and inevitably going down to destruction. An east victory looms up before the friends of Bell and Everett. Let them prepare to grasp it.—Rep. Banner.

The Union men of Kenton are in fine spirits and are determined to make a grand fight.

From the Observer and Reporter, July 11.

County Court Day—Breckinridge and Yancyville—A young gentleman from Nashville Tennessee now on a visit to North Alabama, writes from Athens, Ala., to a friend, as follows:

"The people here talk politics from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M., without stopping for breath. There is, at times, much hard feeling, and I have heard several say that there will be fighting soon. Of course, I don't believe the State and the Douglas are largely in the majority. They say they will certainly carry the State. I have no means of forming an opinion that would be worth anything. Houston (of Ala.) has returned, but will not commit himself to either side yet. I understand that he is in very poor spirits, and says things have not come to the worst yet. He believes, I have been informed, that rupture is imminent and can hardly be prevented."

The New Orleans Present, a Democratic paper, denounces Breckinridge and goes for Bell and Everett. Rats will leave a sinking ship.

THE COMMONWEALTH.
FRANKFORT.
Published by A. G. HODGES & CO.
MONDAY, JULY 16, 1860.

For President,
JOHN BELL,
OF TENNESSEE.

For Vice President,
EDWARD EVERETT,
OF MASSACHUSETTS.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals,
GEN. LESLIE COMBS,
OF FAYETTE COUNTY.

Clerkship of the Court of Appeals.
According to the recommendation of the Central Committee of the Constitutional Union party, the several aspirants for the office of Clerk of the Court of Appeals, and a number of other gentlemen, friends of the different candidates, met in this city on Friday last. After a full and free conference between the aspirants, a plan for selecting the most suitable candidate was agreed upon—each one agreeing to abide the decision, and heartily to support him on whom the choice should fall. The plan was for each candidate to select a certain number of friends, and all of those friends thus selected to meet and confer together, and ballot until a choice was made. This plan was gone into in good faith, and the result was the selection of Gen. LESLIE COMBS, of Fayette, as the candidate of our party. Gen. Combs is so well known throughout the State and the Union as a public man, that it is unnecessary for us to say anything in relation to his political opinions, other than that he is for Bell and Everett, the Constitution and the Union, heart and soul. He was raised in a clerk's office, and is well qualified for the office, and is a lawyer of National reputation. We shall give him an earnest and hearty support, as we should have done any other gentleman who might have been the choice of those selected to decide upon a candidate.

Will They Do It?
There is not a reflecting man in the land but clearly sees that the Democrats have it in their power, by supporting Bell and Everett, to annihilate the Republican party, and stifle the rank treason it is propagating, but the question is—will they do it? As the Tennessee Chronicle remarks, the unscrupulous leaders of the Democracy will not, but there are enough of sensible and moderate men belonging to that party to do it, if they can master the courage to assert their independence and exercise their rights as free men. Such men as these must see that the party with which they have so long acted, so far from imparting strength to the Union, and increasing the harmony of its sections, has constantly weakened the one and distracted the other, until, after years of absolute rule, the Union is on the verge of dissolution and consequent civil war. Such men as these must see that the broken fragments of Democracy are powerless to defeat the fanatic hordes of the North aided by a common hostility to the institutions of the South, and they must see clearly that their co-operation with the Union party is the only chance for the overthrow of the Republican party. The Union party cannot go over to the Democracy, because we look upon it as the author of all the evils which afflict the body politic, and see in its policy, as heretofore carried out, the promise of no single result different from those aimed at by the Republicans, who owe their birth, nurture and strength to that very policy. But we offer to the whole people a national ticket—men who have honored themselves by reflecting honor upon the country—men of ability, experience, conservative and national sentiments, and characters who at tempt to assail them. To support this ticket, is to uphold the Union, the Constitution, and the Law; to reject it, is to strengthen the Republicans and to court Disunion. Let sensible Democrats think well before they act, for upon them rests a heavy responsibility.

A short time since we wrote and published the following article:

"The Paducah Herald is out for Breckinridge and Lane. We supposed that paper would support the nominee of the Bolters Convention if he was an ultra Southern man, or one against whom the editor of the Herald was not virtually committed. But we did not expect the Herald to endorse Breckinridge after the numerous articles which have appeared in that paper expressing doubts of the soundness of that gentleman's opinions on the squatter sovereignty question. But it seems the editor is now entirely satisfied, and will heartily support the Bolters nominee."

The editor of the Herald in reply, frankly admits that he "did doubt Mr. Breckinridge's soundness" on that question, and goes into an enumeration of the grounds upon which his doubts were founded, and asks us the following question: "We therefore ask the Commonwealth if there was not reason in all this for doubting the correctness of the views of Mr. Breckinridge?"

We most certainly do think "there was good reason for doubting the correctness of his views," and we still are as much impressed with that belief as we ever were; and while we personally esteem Mr. Breckinridge as a social clever gentleman, and think him politically very unsound on that and many other questions. The editor of the Herald, it seems, has become satisfied with "the correctness of his views," and therefore supports him. We have not changed our opinion as to his unsoundness, and therefore still earnestly oppose him. The editor of the Herald is "satisfied" of Mr. Breckinridge's soundness, on what, we consider very small and unsatisfactory evidence. The only change we can see in him is that he has heretofore been considered a friend of the Union, and now he allows himself to be put up as a candidate by those whose position, to say the least of it, is equivocal, if not directly opposed to the perpetuity of the Union of the States.

The receipts of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for June were $374,437.39, against $350,444.16, for the corresponding month last year.

Bell and Everett men of Newport raised a handsome pole on the 4th inst. Telling speeches were made by Messrs. Anderson and Fennell. The crowd was hopeful and enthusiastic.

Democracy and Consistency.
The organization of a revolutionary sectional party in 1856, under the leadership of Seward, Greeley, and other political fanatics, drove thousands of conservative men into the ranks of the Democracy. The nationality of this party held out hopes to these men of defeating those whom they believed would rend the Union in their mad strife for power, and they eagerly embraced the opportunity, though at the sacrifice of many lifelong dislikes, and the yielding of differences on points of less magnitude than the conservation of the Union of these States. The writer of this was one of those thousands who gave a cheerful support to Buchanan and Breckinridge, on the ground of the nationality of their party and the chivalry of their political views; and if circumstances have concurred that render it no longer possible to support these political chiefs, it results from the same process of reasoning which first impelled him to their support. He must either stultify himself for his course in 1856, or seek some party connection that promises to carry out the patriotic purposes which the Democratic party now fails to fulfill.

The action at Charleston and Baltimore has destroyed this party; and in the stead of a national organization, we have an exploded Mythus: in the stead of one broad Aegis, that should cover the whole country with a protecting shelter, we have fragments that only serve to crush the party forms that are endeavoring to hide their nakedness under them.

It is not my purpose now to exhibit the manhood of the Hottentots, spoken of by Franklin in a letter to Tom Paine; nor to furnish evidences of apostasy that I may escape the charge of conversion; my complaint is not what the Democratic party has done, but what it longer fails to do. As I said before, the only attraction which the Democratic party ever had for thousands upon thousands of honest and sincere men, was its nationality and freedom from sectionalism; but recently having exhibited a lack of the one, and the bitterest evidences of the other—each of the several bleeding members, crying out "lo, I am the head!"—it may continue for a little while to exhibit the nervous twinges of a severed snake, but its life has gone out, and the sun will soon go down upon these last evidences of expiring life, and this proud party will be come a thing of the past, as verily as the Gullies, or the Giblins, or the Roundheads of Oliver Cromwell. It remains for that large class of conservative men, who are as far from being actuated by the motives that move politicians and demagogues, as from being hindered from doing what they believe to be right by the jeers of partisans, and with whom, under Heaven, lie the issues in the coming contest, to determine which party and set of men best deserve the support of honest patriots. They owe it to themselves and their country, and to a descent regard for the consistency of their course, to examine well the issues before them, and not to forsake principle for party denunciation; they have shown themselves superior to the claims of mere party, and are they now to be influenced by the clamors of demagogues, though they are as plausible as Mark Anthony and Bawl till they become as hoarse as Mohametan Demisses? These men may be hero worshipers, as all men are more or less, but they are not to be imposed upon by political shams, who vaunt themselves as of consequence, and only exhibit the melancholy spectacle of little men, consumed by a mean ambition. To follow such leadership, is to be betrayed; if not by treasonable design, at last by blundering mediocrity; and this, in public men, has always been accounted a crime since the world began. It is painful to witness the degeneracy of public men, and it seems, indeed, as if the time had really come when the "post of honor is a private station," for to name some who aspire to become successors of our first great President, although it would be to brand them with incompetency by the comparison, is to compliment them infinitely beyond their intrinsic merit, and although they strut in the borrowed plumage of a temporary popularity, a living historian now tolerably advanced in life may strip them to the proportions of the jackdaw, if he does not omit all mention of their very names.

I am not going to assail any individual, but will endeavor to show that the same motives that impelled conservative men to support the National Democratic nominees in 1856, now force them to seek another national ticket, and to rally to its support with all the ardor of the former occasion; indeed, I may say, more imperatively demand their support; for the Democratic party has lost all of its moral weight, as a conservative element in the country, and is but another evidence in its dismemberment and sectionalization of the power of that fanaticism which threatens to sweep away every other issue, save a geographical one.

To support the southern wing of the Democracy, is to confess the power of sectionalism which would require a co-operation with Black Republicanism, and which we reprehend in the followers of Lincoln and Hamlin, if the advocate of Breckinridge lived to the north of Mason and Dixon's line. To turn again to Douglas we have the leadership of one of the most desperate political demagogues who ever aspired to honorable position; and judging from those who surround him, we should say every office he has been battered away for support, for they are a band of men who are only moved at the prospect of plunder, and in whom love of country has been resolved into love of the revenue they can embezzle. I therefore say that no man who supported the Cincinnati nominees in 1856, on the ground of their nationality, can give his support to either of the nominees of the Baltimore fragments without stultifying himself. If he is consistent to principle, he must scorn a consistency to mere party denunciation—the thing is irreconcilable, and it remains for men who have asserted their manhood when occasion required to do it again when duty demands it.

As for myself, I feel about as much compunction in taking such a step, as in casting off a garment that had become soiled or useless, and regard the defunct Democracy about in the same light. I, however, honor it for the good it has done, so I honor the old coat that protected my back from the pitiless storm; but all the patching and mending of the most skillful needle work can never obliterate the rent that a renderer it useless. And thus it is with the Democracy: it has served its purposes, and the infusion of "all the talents" cannot galvanize it into life, and henceforth it will only be regarded as a curious fossil that was extinct with life in a former age.

To those who regard political apostasy as a crime of the first magnitude, and point with scorn at those who choose to think for themselves, and who are not to be deterred by demagogues, I have only to say I regard all insinuations, of whatever kind, proceeding from such a source, with infinite contempt. Having no political aspirations to gratify, I am not willing to promote the ambitious views of men who have shown no other ability except for intrigue, and who are not willing that the country should have repose, unless they are accepted as the only fit persons to administer the government. These will be found to be the sentiments of enough of the independent voters of Kentucky to secure the electoral vote of the State for a conservative candidate for President. Our people have been accustomed to the leadership of statesmen, and are heartily disgusted with the shams who have been the recipients of their honors for some years; and they are determined to place the State in the honorable position before the country which she once occupied, and not allow her to be eclipsed in Congress and all conventions, as she has for some years, by sending representatives whose presence is only known when the roll is called, or by the utterance of some rapid declamation, that makes our cheeks redden as we read.

These and other considerations compel me to the support of BELL and EVERETT, who are offered as an olive branch, around which all the conservative elements of the country can rally. They are statesmen of integrity and of a purity of public and private life, which gives assurance of the fidelity and wisdom of their administration. The vulgar ambition for the mere possession of power and place, is as far from having fascinations for these men as the hope of illicit gain. They exhibit a striking contrast in their lives to the crowd of hungry politicians who are agitating the country in the hope of forcing themselves into power; and offer an opportunity for the good men of the land "to redeem the time" and restore the primitive purity to the administration of the government.

The name of Everett has an honorable association with that of Washington, and its record in the catalogue of his successors could add nothing to the brightness of his fame; and his consenting to preside over the Senate of the United States will be a sacrifice which will inflict a continual wound upon his scholarship and good taste; for the rapid declamation of the most of that assembly is notoriously an outrage upon both.

It is not necessary that I should say anything in commendation of gentlemen who have been so prominently before the country and are so favorably known, and the great mass of the people, with whom lie the virtue and safety of popular governments, will be swift to testify the estimation in which they are held.

If I do not subscribe an individual name to this communication, it is because one of far more eminence would have little significance when principle is involved, and were it a "tower of strength" in itself, it would have less power than the simple truth; therefore, I underwrite.

UNIONIST, LATELY DEMOCRAT.

John C. Breckinridge in 1856.
We made a quotation, a short time since, from a speech made by Mr. Breckinridge, in Lexington, after his election in 1856, which showed that he was as deep in the mire of Squatter Sovereignty as Douglas is in the mud. We now give an extract from another speech of his, made in the same year in the State of Indiana, during the canvass, in which the same doctrine of Squatter Sovereignty is avowed, and in which he goes still further, and says that he belongs to "no party that has for its object the extension of slavery." How will this suit the "Southern wing"? Here is the extract, to which we invite the particular attention of our readers:

"I am connected with no party that has for its object the extension of slavery, nor with any to prevent the people of a State or Territory from deciding the question of its existence or non-existence with them for themselves."

There it is! He is "connected with no party that has for its object the extension of slavery." As the Columbus Enquirer pertinently asks, "did ever John Bell utter a sentiment of that import? Did he not demand, in 1850, facilities for the 'expansion' of slavery? and has he ever, in any locality or on any occasion, repudiated the 'object' of extending the institutions of his section?" If so, we want a citation to the record.

"And Mr. Breckinridge says that he will leave it to the people of a Territory to decide for themselves whether they will tolerate slavery among them. He makes no distinction between a State and a Territory, but is willing to concede to them similar and equal powers over this question. Then, why was he nominated by a Convention which professed to repudiate Squatter Sovereignty, and which claims protection by Congress against the license which Mr. Breckinridge says he would grant to the people of the Territories? What is the Seceders' platform worth, with such a candidate mounted upon it? Is not Bell, with his consistent record for a platform, incomparably more reliable and trustworthy than Breckinridge, with a platform which he cannot honestly occupy?"

SHELBY COUNTY AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL ASSOCIATION.—We have received the premium list of this association for their second exhibition, which is to be held at the Fair Grounds, at Shelbyville, beginning on Tuesday, August 22nd, and continuing four days. Two thousand dollars are offered in premiums for the animals, farm products, domestic manufactures, &c., &c., usually exhibited at fairs. The premiums are liberal, ranging from $5 to $50. We wish our Shelby friends great success, and hope their liberal hospitality will be taxed to its utmost capacity by a large attendance of visitors from a distance.

We are indebted to Mr. J. A. Middleton, the attentive and clever Secretary of the Association, for the premium list and an invitation to attend the Fair, which we will be pleased to do if our business engagements will allow. He will please accept our thanks.

The Breckinridge YANCKEY sectionalists in Virginia, are trying to patch up a truce with the Douglas men, with a view to having an election at ticket in common. It's no use; Virginia intends to vote for Bell and Everett.

It is amusing to witness the efforts of the Democracy to appear in good humor and enthusiastic. They twist their funeral faces into the most semicomic shapes. The comic almanac makers can make everlasting fortunes by getting sketches of them.

Early Recollections.
Amongst the first Methodists we recollect were Doctor H. and his wife Polly. They were quite old people when they came from Virginia to Kentucky. The Doctor had been a surgeon in the British army, and attended upon Gen. Wolfe, who was killed at the battle of Quebec. He had been, according to his own account, a very great opposer of the Bedlamites, as he so called the Methodists, when he first became acquainted with them in Virginia, where he settled after he left the British army. He married a Virginia lady, who was much taken with the zeal and piety of the early Methodists, and having a good deal of the old Virginia spirit, she joined a band of them, much against the will and wish of her husband. His account of it was, that in despite of his ridicule, in despite of his opposition, made in every shape, Polly would attend meetings, and would be constantly found singing and praying and enjoying herself in manifestations of contentment and happiness he was wholly unable to account for, on any other hypothesis than that she had lost her mind. He concluded that he must resort to the most approved practice of the day to bring her back to her senses. He therefore, regardless of her protestations, shaved her head, and put a blister plaster on it. But he said it did no good; for it could not draw the grace of God out of her heart, though it made her head terribly sore. He found her missing from her room one day shortly after he had blistered her; and on looking into another room of the house he discovered her, on her knees, and heard her putting up such a sweet, beautiful prayer in his behalf. Beseeching Heaven's forgiveness to her husband for his blindness in not seeing that she was in her right mind, and that he himself was in darkness, he was struck down upon his knees, and joined her in prayer, and became one of the most devoted Methodists the world ever saw.

The first memory we have of him was his coming into the sick room of our mother, when our father, sister, older than ourself, and a few friends were standing around the sick bed, and expecting every moment to see our mother die.

Without a word said to any one, he fell upon his knees, in the middle of the floor, and prayed with a fervor only his own, that his sister in the church might be spared to her husband; but children, and her friends; that this little church of which she had been one of the first and most active members might not lose her influence and example, and so continued for at least fifteen or twenty minutes, and when he arose from his knees, without a word, he proceeded to examine the patient's condition, and prescribe and prepare his medicine.

The patient recovered. What agency his prayer had in bringing about the case, the writer does not even conjecture; certain it is the patient not only got well, but outlived her physician many years.

For a long period of time the old Doctor devoted himself, as did his dear wife Polly, as he called her, solely to works of charity, and the observance of religious duties.

The old gentleman was what used to be denominated a "noisy or shouting Methodist." His peculiar mode of giving expression to his approbation of any sentiment uttered by the preacher, or to give vent to his gratified feelings, was by a peculiar laugh, always ending by the exclamation "Glory to God," "Bless the Lord," or something equivalent.

Money was scarce in those days. Cut nine pence sharp was their angle, never could be kept long enough on hand to endanger the soundness of one's pocket. A collection in Church that brought the circuit rider from a dollar to a dollar and a half, was what a man by the name of Williams used to call making a "big raise." From a quarter to a half was a "little raise."

The early Methodist preachers were men who certainly followed their calling from no expectation of gain, nor because the life they led presented attractions from the ease with which they could live. They toiled in their calling in real earnest; and that is not all, they were contented to confine themselves to preaching the Gospel, and had no time to be meddling with questions calculated to excite and disturb the peace of society. In the court houses, log school houses, or under the trees, they preached the word of God, and confined themselves to that strictly, leaving slavery and other matters affecting temporal concerns to men of regular pursuits. What a contrast is Methodist practice of the present day, with what it was forty years ago.

The master and the servant, the rich man and the poor one, at the period last named, were found in the same meeting, worshipping the one only true God, and none were considered so much better than his fellows as to say "stand thou back there," or "come ye up here, and join ye in worship with me."

We saw a beautiful example of the early practice a few Sabbaths since, in Owen, at a church of the old Baptists. A portion of the house was set apart to the slaves, who participated with their owners in singing, and though they knew nothing of music as a science, they sang the good old hymns of Watts, in unison with the whites, in a way to make one's heart glad to hear; and when the sacrament was administered, a colored man passed the bread and wine to those of his fellow servants who belonged to the church, at the same time the deacons passed them to the whites of the congregation.

If the Christian practice was everywhere so conducted, how much better would it be for the world. Heaven has allowed in life differences and distinctions in races and in talents, for some wise purpose; but in the grave, to which we go, all are on an equality, and in the next world we are taught that the only differences will be in the grades of Christian graces. The first may be last, and the last first.

Amongst the first Methodists we recollect were Doctor H. and his wife Polly. They were quite old people when they came from Virginia to Kentucky. The Doctor had been a surgeon in the British army, and attended upon Gen. Wolfe, who was killed at the battle of Quebec. He had been, according to his own account, a very great opposer of the Bedlamites, as he so called the Methodists, when he first became acquainted with them in Virginia, where he settled after he left the British army. He married a Virginia lady, who was much taken with the zeal and piety of the early Methodists, and having a good deal of the old Virginia spirit, she joined a band of them, much against the will and wish of her husband. His account of it was, that in despite of his ridicule, in despite of his opposition, made in every shape, Polly would attend meetings, and would be constantly found singing and praying and enjoying herself in manifestations of contentment and happiness he was wholly unable to account for, on any other hypothesis than that she had lost her mind. He concluded that he must resort to the most approved practice of the day to bring her back to her senses. He therefore, regardless of her protestations, shaved her head, and put a blister plaster on it. But he said it did no good; for it could not draw the grace of God out of her heart, though it made her head terribly sore. He found her missing from her room one day shortly after he had blistered her; and on looking into another room of the house he discovered her, on her knees, and heard her putting up such a sweet, beautiful prayer in his behalf. Beseeching Heaven's forgiveness to her husband for his blindness in not seeing that she was in her right mind, and that he himself was in darkness, he was struck down upon his knees, and joined her in prayer, and became one of the most devoted Methodists the world ever saw.

The first memory we have of him was his coming into the sick room of our mother, when our father, sister, older than ourself, and a few friends were standing around the sick bed, and expecting every moment to see our mother die.

Without a word said to any one, he fell upon his knees, in the middle of the floor, and prayed with a fervor only his own, that his sister in the church might be spared to her husband; but children, and her friends; that this little church of which she had been one of the first and most active members might not lose her influence and example, and so continued for at least fifteen or twenty minutes, and when he arose from his knees, without a word, he proceeded to examine the patient's condition, and prescribe and prepare his medicine.

The patient recovered. What agency his prayer had in bringing about the case, the writer does not even conjecture; certain it is the patient not only got well, but outlived her physician many years.

For a long period of time the old Doctor devoted himself, as did his dear wife Polly, as he called her, solely to works of charity, and the observance of religious duties.

The old gentleman was what used to be denominated a "noisy or shouting Methodist." His peculiar mode of giving expression to his approbation of any sentiment uttered by the preacher, or to give vent to his gratified feelings, was by a peculiar laugh, always ending by the exclamation "Glory to God," "Bless the Lord," or something equivalent.

Money was scarce in those days. Cut nine pence sharp was their angle, never could be kept long enough on hand to endanger the soundness of one's pocket. A collection in Church that brought the circuit rider from a dollar to a dollar and a half, was what a man by the name of Williams used to call making a "big raise." From a quarter to a half was a "little raise."

The early Methodist preachers were men who certainly followed their calling from no expectation of gain, nor because the life they led presented attractions from the ease with which they could live. They toiled in their calling in real earnest; and that is not all, they were contented to confine themselves to preaching the Gospel, and had no time to be meddling with questions calculated to excite and disturb the peace of society. In the court houses, log school houses, or under the trees, they preached the word of God, and confined themselves to that strictly, leaving slavery and other matters affecting temporal concerns to men of regular pursuits. What a contrast is Methodist practice of the present day, with what it was forty years ago.

The master and the servant, the rich man and the poor one, at the period last named, were found in the same meeting, worshipping the one only true God, and none were considered so much better than his fellows as to say "stand thou back there," or "come ye up here, and join ye in worship with me."

We saw a beautiful example of the early practice a few Sabbaths since, in Owen, at a church of the old Baptists. A portion of the house was set apart to the slaves, who participated with their owners in singing, and though they knew nothing of music as a science, they sang the good old hymns of Watts, in unison with the whites, in a way to make one's heart glad to hear; and when the sacrament was administered, a colored man passed the bread and wine to those of his fellow servants who belonged to the church, at the same time the deacons passed them to the whites of the congregation.

If the Christian practice was everywhere so conducted, how much better would it be for the world. Heaven has allowed in life differences and distinctions in races and in talents, for some wise purpose; but in the grave, to which we go, all are on an equality, and in the next world we are taught that the only differences will be in the grades of Christian graces. The first may be last, and the last first.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS.

The proprietors and manufacturers of HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS can appeal with perfect confidence to physicians and citizens generally of the United States, because the article has attained a reputation heretofore unknown. A few facts upon this point will speak more powerfully than volumes of bare assertion or blazoning puffery. The consumption of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for the last year amounted to over a half million bottles, and from its manifest steady increase in time past, it is evident that during the coming year the consumption will reach one million bottles. This immense amount could never have been sold but for the rare medicinal properties contained in the preparation, and the sanction of the most prominent physicians in those sections of the country where the article is best known, who not only recommend the Bitters to their patients, but are ready at all times to give testimonials to its efficacy in all cases of stomachic derangement and the diseases resulting therefrom.

This is not a temporary popularity, obtained by extraordinary efforts in the way of trumpeting the qualities of the Bitters, but a solid estimation of an invaluable medicine, which is destined to be as enduring as time itself. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters have proved a Godsend to regions where fever and ague and various other bilious complaints have counted their victims by hundreds. It has been able to state consistently that the "Bitters" are a certain cure for the Dyspepsia and like diseases, is to the proprietors a source of unalloyed pleasure. It removes all morbid matter from the stomach, purifies the blood, and imparts renewed vitality to the nervous system giving it that tone and energy indispensable for the restoration of health. It operates upon the stomach, liver, and other digestive organs, mildly but powerfully, and soon restores them to a condition essential to the healthy discharge of the functions of nature.

Elderly persons using the Bitters daily as per directions on the bottle, and they will find in it a stimulant peculiarly adapted to comfort declining years, as it is pleasant to the palate, invigorating to the bowels, excellent as a tonic, and rejuvenating generally. We have the evidence of thousands of aged men and women who have experienced the benefit of using this preparation while suffering from stomach derangements and general debility; acting under the advice of physicians, they have abandoned all deleterious drugs and fairly tested the merits of this article. A few words to the gentler sex. There are certain periods when their cares are so harassing that many of them sink under the trial. The relation of mother and child is so absorbingly tender, that the mother, especially if she is young, is apt to forget her own health in her extreme anxiety for her infant. Should the period of maternity arrive during the summer season, the wear of body and mind is generally aggravated. Here then, is a necessity for a medicine to regulate the energies of the system, and enable the mother to bear up under her exhausting trials and responsibilities. Nursing mothers generally prefer the Bitters to all other invigorators, because it is agreeable to the taste as well as certain to give a permanent increase of bodily strength.

All those persons, to whom we have particularly referred above, to wit: sufferers from fever and ague, caused by malaria, diarrhoea, dysentery, indigestion, loss of appetite, and all diseases or derangements of the stomach, superannuated invalids, persons of sedentary occupation, and nursing mothers, will consult their own physical welfare by giving to Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters a trial.

CAUTION.—We caution the public against using any of the many imitations or counterfeits, but ask for HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS, and see that each bottle has the words "Dr. J. C. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters" blown on the side of the bottle, and stamped on the metallic cap covering the cork, and observe that our autograph signature is on the label.
